THE SHINE CAREER SCHOOL

Every girl can achieve her dreams.

The Young Living Foundation is funding the Hope for Justice Shine Career School in Phnom Penh, Cambodia. Over the past year, your donations have helped Hope for Justice expand the school to receive 10th-grade accreditation. This inspiring school offers intensive high school tutoring and classes to girls who have been rescued from human trafficking, including sexual exploitation, forced labor, and forced begging. In these classes, they learn Khmer, English, math, science, history, geography, civics, physical education, and computer technology.

In addition to education, Hope for Justice arranges training for rescued girls in nearly any career field they choose! Whether they want to become a photographer, chef, entrepreneur, or a jewelry or fashion designer, the staff at the Shine Career School works to ensure that the girls receive specialized career training opportunities that allow them to pursue their dreams.

A WORLD FREE FROM SLAVERY

Hope for Justice's ultimate goal is to live in a world free from slavery, and we believe in it. With more than 20 million slaves in the world—more than half of which are women and girls—human trafficking is one of the most devastating social issues of our time. The time to end it is now—in this generation!

#LOVEFREEDOM

You can be sure that every penny you donate works hard to bring freedom, justice, and restoration to victims of human trafficking. Together, we can use our freedom to change lives.

Join the fight and share the message of living in a world free from slavery!
